U. S. Carrier Pilots Destroy 8 Japanese Ships

Convoy Found in East China Sea Put Out of Action

By MORRIS LANDSBERG
UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Guam, Monday, March 26—(AP)—United States carrier pilots destroyed an eight-ship Japanese convoy Saturday west of the East China sea island of Amami in the Ryukyu group while fast battleships were bombarding Minami Daito, Tony island about 250 miles southeast.

The actions were a continuation of the carrier strikes Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher began against the Japanese homeland March 18.

Nimitz Announces Attacks
The carrier action was announced today, twenty-four hours after fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported the battleship bombardments, which sent surface ships firing their sixteen-inch explosive shells into targets only a few hundred miles south of Tokyo itself.

Both these actions preceded by only a few hours Sunday morning's destructive B-29 raid on Nagoya. The Superforts left much of the huge Mitsubishi aircraft engine plant in ruins as they attacked from dangerously low levels with both demolition and incendiary bombs. Three B-29s were lost.

Sink Three Cargo Vessels
The carrier plane attack sank three large cargo vessels, two destroyers and three other escort vessels—possibly destroyer escorts or gunboats.

Nimitz said the action occurred west of Amami, which would place the attack in the East China sea, more than 500 miles from the coast of China.

Amami Gunto (group) is one of the most important of the Ryukyu chain of islands linking the Japanese homeland with Formosa to the south.

The action extended Mitscher's concerted bombing of the Japanese homeland and adjacent Okinawa and Ryukyu islands to the south into the seventh day of the last night, the most damaging and extended carrier action of the war against the Pacific enemy's homeland.

Airfield Bombed
Nimitz also reported Seventh army air force Liberators bombed Chichi Jima's airfield March 23. On the same date, army Mustang fighters bombed and strafed Japanese naval installations and air facilities on the same island. Other army Liberators bombed Marcus Island storage areas.

Fourth marine aircraft wing pilots, attacking through intense anti-aircraft fire, destroyed a bridge, a large building and started fires on Sabelthup in the Palau in Sunday. Marine Corsair fighters on the same date bombed installations on Yap in the Western Carolines.

Jewish Brigade Battles Germans

By SID FEDER
ROME, March 25—(AP)—The first and only completely Jewish brigade is operating with the British Eighth army in Italy. Allied headquarters announced today as patrol raids continued along the stalemated front.

Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of Allied ground forces, said "he was delighted" to have the Jewish outfit under his command and added that the Jewish people who have suffered so terribly at the hands of the Nazis should now be directly represented by this frontline fighting force.

Members of the brigade wear blue and white arm insignia with the Star of David superimposed on a shield.

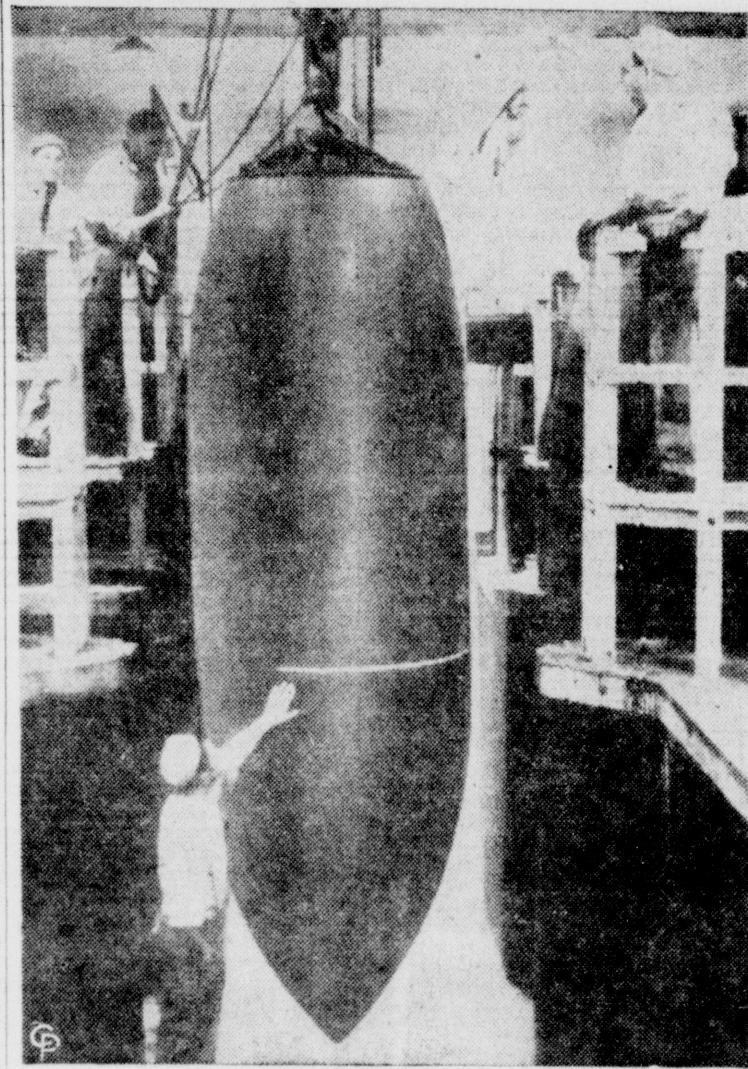

The brigade is led by Brig. Gen. Frank Benjamin, a Jew in the regular British army. It has been involved in patrol actions since the early part of March and several Germans were killed recently by a patrol leader who is a German refugee whose family disappeared after being deported to Poland.

Many of the brigade's members previously were held in Nazi concentration camps in Europe.

The brigade is a self-contained unit consisting of artillery, infantry, engineering, signal, transport, order, and medical units. The men were drawn from 35,000 volunteers and although it is estimated 1,000,000 Jewish soldiers are fighting on the Allied side this outfit is the only group specifically designated as a Jewish unit.

Headquarters announced a German raid in company strength was turned back by the Eighth army southeast of Cotignola with the enemy suffering numerous casualties.

HERE IS THE NEW ELEVEN-TON BOMB—the Titan of the blockbusters which Britain has turned out to provide bigger and better punishment for Germany. Named the Volcano, the giant missile is being used against European targets heretofore considered impregnable.

U. S. Operation Of Coal Mines Appears Likely

By HAROLD W. WARD
WASHINGTON, March 25 (AP)—The government reluctantly prepared today to step into the soft coal wage conference if the next few crucial days do not end the deadlock between operators and John L. Lewis.

By next Saturday at midnight the present contract is due to expire and if Lewis has not agreed to extension, spasms of work interruption or a halt on a "no-contract, no-work" basis might well follow.

Miners Will Vote
On Wednesday the National Labor Relations Board will conduct, as a result of notice by miner President Lewis that a dispute existed, a nationwide strike vote among the 400,000 bituminous miners.

The United States Conciliation Service intends to hold off as long as a ray of light emanates from the present negotiations between committees representing operators and United Mine Workers.

War Labor Board Chairman George W. Taylor says "it's up to the conciliation service to move first, we have no immediate plans."

Sec. Perkins May Act
Neither Secretary of Labor Perkins, who directs the conciliation service and must therefore take the initiative among all government agencies, nor Secretary of Interior Ickes, who took over the mines and wrote the agreement ending the controversy two years ago, has been eager to act thus far.

Miss Perkins was reticent about her plans and one source close to Ickes said "he's not reaching" for the mines.

There was no guarantee that if President Roosevelt finds it advisable to order government seizure that he would again assign the job to Ickes. This time that task might go to the army.

German commentators speak vaguely of establishing new fronts. Setting up a new front across the flat lands of Northern Germany, with transportation cut to pieces would be all but impossible.

How rapidly the Nazis' Rhine line is going to pieces is exemplified not only in the reports of new Allied crossings but in the swift linking up of airborne units with ground forces of the Allies on the lower Rhine bridgehead.

There has been a sudden acceleration in the rate of prisoners taken. Presumably, part of this is accounted for by the swift lunges of the Allied forces with resulting encirclement of small groups. But in part, the decline in the German will to

30th Division Breaks Hitler's Defense on Rhine

By WES GALLAGHER AND ROBERT EUNSON
WITH THE UNITED STATES NINTH ARMY, March 25 (AP)—The famous "Old Hickory" Thirtieth division broke clear through Hitler's Rhine defenses into open country north of the Ruhr today in one of the most brilliant infantry successes of the war.

The Thirtieth troops found German resistance apparently completely disintegrated at a point eight miles from the Rhine, and jumped on tanks shortly after noon and "took off."

Smash German Lines
Every element of a breakthrough—such as characterized the armored-infantry gallop after the Roer river crossing and in dashes through France—was indicated. Field officers of the Thirtieth said the division had gone clear through organized German defense lines and "broken into the open."

The Thirtieth's surge carried it to the head of all other advances in the Twenty-first army group.

The United States Seventy-ninth division on the Thirtieth's flank made almost as good progress, but encountered some spotty German armored pockets which held it up slightly behind the Thirtieth.

Spearhead Ninth Army
These two veteran outfits spearheaded the Ninth army's burst across the Rhine, and the Thirtieth had a bridge over the historic river just fourteen hours and fifteen minutes after it launched its attack.

Resistance in front of the Thirtieth dwindled to almost nothing as the morning progressed and cooks, bakers and all sorts of odds and ends which characterize rear areas flowed into the prisoner cages.

At the south end of his front, Malinovsky's troops captured Casar, sixteen miles south of Komarom and five miles east of Kibler rail center.

At this point, the two armies linked to build up a solid ninety-mile front stretching from the Danube to the west shore of Lake Balaton.

Red Army Tank Forces Advance In Vienna Drive

Race to within 36 Miles of Austria in Unchecked Offensive

By ROMNEY WHEELER
LONDON, Monday, March 26 (AP)—Red army tank spearheads raced within thirty-six miles of Austria and seventy-seven miles southeast of Vienna yesterday as a second mighty Soviet army joined Russia's Vienna-bound offensive that was sweeping unchecked across industrial Western Hungary on a ninety-mile front.

While Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukraine army gained up to sixteen miles overnight, Premier Stalin announced that the second Ukraine army under Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky had joined the battle and gained twenty-eight miles in the initial phases of an offensive along the south bank of the Danube.

Advance on Komarom
The two powerful armies were within six miles southeast of Komarom, Danube river key to Vienna and Bratislava, had outflanked the great rail city of Győr and were battering through Nazi defenses only four miles from the key communications center of Papa, Moscow disclosed.

Malinovsky's new offensive erupted as the vast eastern front appeared to be blazing into a full-scale spring offensive synchronizing with Anglo-American drives from the west. Berlin spoke of a new Soviet drive in southwestern Poland aimed at the Moravian gap leading into Czechoslovakia and on to Prague and Vienna.

Danzig Seems Doomed
At the same time, Premier Stalin, in a second order of the day, announced the fall of Helliggenbell, last big enemy stronghold in East Prussia southwest of Königsberg. The Baltic ports of Danzig and Gdynia shelled and bombed by Russian artillery and planes, faced capture as the Russians took a suburb of Danzig and pushed closer to Gdynia.

Malinovsky's army, which until its present offensive had been poised on the north bank of the Danube, joined Tolbukhin's forces on the southern bank after recapturing the ancient Hungarian capital of Esztergom, nineteen miles northwest of Budapest. The Germans had retaken Esztergom in their January attempt to relieve Pudest.

Malinovsky's army, under twenty-seven generals and a rear admiral of the Danube river naval flotilla, swept over all territory lost to the two-army offensive.

Pushing west on a twenty-mile front, the Second Ukrainians swept along the Danube's bank as far as Duna-Almas, eleven miles east of Komarom, while spearheads a few miles south of the river drove on further to win Mosca, six miles southeast of the key stronghold which lies astride both banks of the river.

These forces were fifty-nine miles southeast of the Slovak capital of Bratislava and twenty-four miles east of Győr, great sixteen-way road and rail center considered an outer fortress of Vienna and northern anchor of the enemy's Rába river defense line protecting the approaches to Austria and its capital. Beyond these are the mountains in which the Nazis may attempt to make their last stand.

At the south end of his front, Malinovsky's troops captured Casar, sixteen miles south of Komarom and five miles east of Kibler rail center. At this point, the two armies linked to build up a solid ninety-mile front stretching from the Danube to the west shore of Lake Balaton.

NAZIS TAKEN PRISONER AFTER TRAP CLOSED

THIS HUGE COLLECTION of German prisoners is but part of the great number taken by the United States Seventh Army after Nazi resistance had collapsed in the Saar and Palatinate. Many of these captives surrendered voluntarily when they learned they were caught in the pincers by the United States Third and Seventh Armies.

Efficiency in Torture:

Cruel Germans Murder Thousands Of Civilians in Prison Compound

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
NATZWEILER, ALSACE, France, March 25 (AP)—Until France's liberation by the Allies Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo added Twentieth century efficiency to medieval torture methods at the Struthof concentration camp atop a vosses Mountain peak just above this village. French officials said today, Statistics found by the French when they overtook Struthof showed 19,103 persons of various nationalities were domiciled in fifteen barracks on August 20, 1944. Their compound was surrounded by electrically charged barbed wire so that only one person, a Russian, ever escaped.

15,000 Cremated
Dr. Alain Doubourg, a French sanitation officer now in charge of the health of the present inmates, consisting chiefly of French collaborationists, estimated that from October, 1941 some 15,000 persons had been cremated.

French officials gave this account: Russian and Poles were hanged from two gallows within sight of all inmates. Inmates of other nationalities if condemned to death were either gassed or shot through the neck.

Bodies were hauled to the ground floor, in the center of which was the cremation oven.

Sell Ashes to Relatives
The gestapo did a flourishing business with ashes—selling them in two types of urns to relatives. Earthen urns were cheaper than metal urns. In another section of the barracks was the lethal chamber. Condemned victims were placed in there thirty-two at one execution.

The Gestapo offered premiums to the young SS men who did the killing. For each they received six extra cigarettes, one pint of schnapps and sixty grams of sausage. After killing ten they were given a two-day furlough.

Drawn up with the help of the War Manpower Commission, the list covers all "B" and "C" card drivers but rates them in four groups with respect to their essentiality to the war effort.

This preferential rating is necessary, OPA explained, because of the sharp reduction in the allocation of new tires for rationing.

The first priority group is limited almost entirely to persons whose occupations are of an emergency nature, and to workers at "must" war plants. Included are physicians, public health nurses, police, and war workers such as those producing urgently needed aircraft and munitions—projects facing a critical manpower shortage.

These plants will be designated after consultation with local WMC officials, OPA said.

In group 2 are persons employed in other essential plants and those whose occupations are highly important to the war effort. Examples are farmers, farm workers, and representatives of management, labor and government who recruit labor for essential establishments.

Group 3 covers such motorists as buyers for essential establishments and those who travel to such places to perform necessary technical services.

Group 4 takes in all other "B" and "C" drivers.

Bradley, chief of Twelfth army group, met at the headquarters of Maj. Gen. John Anderson, commander of the American Sixteenth corps. Eisenhower was called away before the party crossed over to the east bank of the Rhine.

The prime minister made the crossings in an American landing craft. While on the east bank the British leader was persuaded by Simpson not to walk to the nearest village because it had not yet been cleared of mines.

Massive Attack By First Army Plunging Ahead

By HAL BOYLE AND DON WHITEHEAD
WITH THE UNITED STATES FIRST ARMY, March 25—(AP)—United States First Army troops and armor drove nine miles east in a massive attack which began before dawn today, burst out of the Remagen-Erpel bridgehead on the road to Berlin and continued to plunge ahead.

Tanks and doughboys encountered opposition running from moderate on the right flank to heavy on the left flank which borders the strongly-defended industrial Ruhr district. Whooping dust-covered doughboys rode tanks in a series of leapfrog attacks.

Roll Germans Back
The push by powerfully-reinforced divisions rolled the Germans back eastward all along the line. One column speared six miles into Plammersfeld, fourteen and one-half miles east of the Rhine. Another attack carried four miles at the southern end of the bridgehead into Vallendar, three miles north of Coblenz.

This is another "St. Lo" for the First army. The whole scene is reminiscent of the last-out which broke German resistance at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula last July.

We haven't been given any orders to stop," grinned one lean, gray-haired commander, "and we don't intend to stop until we put on the brakes to keep from skidding into Berlin."

Crack Nazi Line
Task forces cracked the first thin wall of Nazi mobile guns and ditch defenses and rolled through beautiful Rhineland hills along roads leading east.

The assault caught the Germans building up forces to launch a counter-attack against the northeastern end of the bridgehead.

Censorship permitted disclosure that the famous First infantry division had joined the bridgehead forces, along with the Ninth, Seventy-eighth, and Ninth infantry. The first division smashed back fourteen German counterattacks in twenty-four hours yesterday, took 500 prisoners, and moved ahead 20 miles.

The U. S. First army was likewise headed Berlinward through Germany's scenic hills in an operation of such scope that a first dispatch likened it to the St. Lo breakthrough in Normandy.

The United States Third army's fourth armored division was so deep into Germany and traveling so fast, that tankmen were sending back urgent calls for transportation for the thousands of prisoners captured.

Yanks Approach Highway Leading To Nazi Capital

Third Army Springs Two New Crossings of Rhine River

LONDON, Monday, March 26 (AP)—The German armed forces radio reported today that new Allied airborne landings were made Sunday on the east bank of the Rhine river.

This report said landings were made "north and southeast of Wesel" and described the airborne forces as "strong."

By EDWARD KENNEDY

PARIS, Monday, March 26 (AP)—Three United States armies surged toward Berlin in breakthroughs yesterday, with Third army tanks setting the pace in a twenty-seven-mile sweep that carried forty miles beyond the Rhine and across a captured bridge over the river main possibly 235 miles from the enemy capital.

The United States Ninth army broke out into the open through the enemy's reaching distance of a Berlin superhighway, and was but ten miles from Essen, industrial heart of the Reich.

First Army Advances
The United States First Army burst the bonds of its Remagen-Erpel bridgehead between these two fronts in a general assault on a thirty-five-mile front that ground nine miles east in a massive attack on the road to Berlin and was roaring on unchecked.

The Third army sprang at least two new crossings of the Rhine south of Coblenz and was nearing a union with the First army forces beyond the river. They last were reported only eleven miles apart.

The British Second army heightened the power of the grand western front offensive by pushing eight miles north of the Rhine onto the German plain, hurling one river on the Berlin route and slashing across a superhighway running to Northern Holland.

With four firm lodgments along 200 miles of the Rhine's east bank from Rues to Worms, German resistance was disintegrating almost everywhere in this spectacular day of gains.

Patton Spears Breakthrough
It was Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's famed Fourth armored division which spearheaded the breakthrough along Germany's waist, and cut across the formidable river main by capturing a bridge intact some 20 miles southeast of Frankfurt-on-the-Main.

"This might have been the bridge at Aschenburg which is twenty miles southeast of Frankfurt and is about thirty-eight miles west of the Rhine."

The Fourth was divided into two lightning-fast combat commands, and at last reports it still was going strong under a security blackout to keep its movements from the bewildered enemy.

A front dispatch said the surge toward the Rhine was going even faster than Patton's drive to the Rhine, and it was sweeping up German soldiers by the thousands.

Fifth Near Frankfurt
Frankfurt itself was only ten miles in front of the Fifth infantry division, which made the Third army's original Rhine crossing, and the industrial city was reported being evacuated tonight of its 546,649 population.

The Paris radio reported a high Nazi official had announced over the radio that all civilians in the Ruhr between Düsseldorf and Dortmund would have to be evacuated immediately. That might include Essen, since the Düsseldorf-Dortmund sector embraces most of the Ruhr industrial valley.

Frankfurt-on-Main, a city of 546,000 population, evidently had been bypassed, as positions forty miles beyond the Rhine would put the Fourth armored division nearly twenty miles northeast of the city.

Gen. Eisenhower's victory offensive was going full blast.

The American broadcasting station in Europe told the German people that Eisenhower's headquarters reported "approximately one-quarter" of the Rhine's east bank was in Allied hands, OWI reported.

The United States Ninth army was headed for a knock-out of the Ruhr without whose factories Germany cannot longer wage war.

It was "out in the open" in what looked like a decisive breakthrough and was almost in sight of a super highway to Berlin.

The British Second army with Canadian elements, evidently had been across the Isère river—first barrier on the North German plain.

The U. S. First army was likewise headed Berlinward through Germany's scenic hills in an operation of such scope that a first dispatch likened it to the St. Lo breakthrough in Normandy.

The United States Third army's fourth armored division was so deep into Germany and traveling so fast, that tankmen were sending back urgent calls for transportation for the thousands of prisoners captured.

LISTEN, WORLD!

—By Elsie Robinson
(Registered U. S. Patent Office)

GO IN DEBT
We Robinsons were poor. Dollars were chancey knick-knacks at best back in California in the 80s. And when you were trying to send five youngsters to college on a piddly bank it certainly took some finagling. Yet the folks managed somehow with plenty of grins left over and if there were sacrifice and regret they never let it cramp our youthful stride.

Poor? Wasn't everyone?
Didn't everyone wear patches, half-soled shoes and hand-me-down dresses? Didn't everyone have corn bread and New Orleans molasses and mugs of milk for supper? What was there strange in that? We had all that really counted—big rambling old houses, dowers by the acre, oranges, peaches, figs, booked piled up, pouring out of every cranny in the place.

People wagged their heads, of course. Chucked—"Those Robinsons! Why'd they have to buy a brand new set of encyclopedias just for themselves where there was a good set at school? Going in debt like that—it's positively criminal! Such extravagance!"

Mineral and Hampshire Residents Oppose Proposed Dams on Potomac

Proposed construction of four dams in the Potomac river basin as recommended by United States Army engineers was unanimously opposed by 1,000 residents of Mineral and Hampshire counties in meetings held Friday and Saturday.

According to Clyde Bonar, Burlington, president of the West Virginia Farm Bureau, not one person spoke in favor of any one of the projects proposed for the North Branch, South Branch, Switzer's creek and Cacapon river. However, a favorable attitude toward the Savage river dam, which has no connection with the fourteen dam proposal of army engineers, was expressed at both gatherings.

It was pointed out that the Savage river dam, which is partially constructed, will help control the flow of the Potomac in dry periods and aid industry in Cumberland but does not cause damage to West Virginia residents.

Williams Presides

Former State Senator George H. Williams presided at the Romney session and explained the purpose and need of the meeting.

Bonar and Albert B. Matthews, Grantsville, W. Va., former president of the State Senate, pointed out that agriculture is set back by coal mining among West Virginia industries. Matthews was named to represent the group at a hearing scheduled for Washington April 3.

William S. Jenkins, Frostburg, coal operator, declared that if power dams are constructed one million tons less of coal will be used annually to produce electricity, and that both industry and labor will suffer.

Picturing the Tygarts valley dam at Gratton, W. Va., an "unhappy affair," Dayton G. Stemple, Philippi, W. Va., attorney, said that if "strong objections" are not made "you will be sorry."

Community Is Named

A committee of twenty-five was named to accompany Matthews to Washington.

Numerous petitions against the dams were signed and resolutions opposing the projects were presented by the Farm Bureau, county court, American Legion, business men and other groups.

Edwin A. Schmidt and Donald Birrell, army engineers from Washington, explained the plan, showed slides of flood damage and told of the location for the proposed dams.

Opponents of the dams said that the "cream of farm land in three valleys would be made worthless."

Bonar presided at the Keyser meeting. Speakers included Charles Ludwig, for the Rotary club; Timothy Carskadon, Peter Homan, Joseph Wright, Raymond Coffman, and Judge Ernest A. See, for the Lions Club; John I. Rogers, delegate to the state legislature; Williams, Morris, Stemple, and Matthews.

Morris said that the dams are only 14 percent for flood control and Judge See asserted the dams will not aid the Potomac Edison Company or other nearby power interests. He said the section's power needs can be met for at least twenty years without the building of the dams.

Bonar stated that the dam suggested for below Keyser at Dawson would be 78 feet high and make the water level 801 feet above sea level. This would just be nine feet below the Mineral county court house, he said. He said the dam would create a flood hazard as it would tend to back up water in New Creek.

Likewise it was stressed that the B. & O. would have to relocate its tracks and might not enter Keyser at all. The Western Maryland railway tracks would also be under water, it was claimed.

Bonar was named chairman of the Mineral group to go to Washington and authorized to select his own committee. Petitions are being circulated and a resolution of protest will be presented in Washington.

It was pointed out that the water of Pattersons creek will cover Fort Ashby and that the new high school will be on an island. Part of Burlington will also be inundated.

International Double Taxation

PAUL DEPERON, secretary of the Fiscal Committee of the League of Nations and member of the league secretariat, is advocating extension by this nation of its international treaties on double taxation. He has completed a study of the subject, which has been published and circulated by the Committee on International Economic Policy in co-operation with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Taxation by more than one country on the same income, estate or other taxable object hampers international investment and discourages world trade, now more vital than ever to the business interests of the United States, according to Deperon. As American enterprise develops raw material resources, establishes branch factories and assembly plants and buys into foreign businesses or participates with foreign capital all over the world, Deperon declares that every American doing business in a foreign country has a stake in the elimination of double taxation.

While through the League of Nations more than sixty tax agreements existed between European countries before the war, the United States was a party to only three—with France, Sweden and Canada.

Three model conventions, offered as a basis of negotiation between countries seeking to arrange mutual adjustment, have now been worked out by the Fiscal Committee of the League of Nations. They were presented at a regional tax conference held in Mexico City in July 1943, and their provisions have since been endorsed by the third conference of the Inter-American Bar Association. Several countries have already entered into negotiations based on their plan.

These conventions strike a balance between the taxing rights of the country where a taxpayer resides and those of the country where his property or source of income is situated, and they include recommendations for eliminating the fiscal evasion for which a confused international tax situation offers many opportunities. Deperon states that such wide differences exist between tax laws in various countries and between their legal definitions of the factors involved, such as "residence," "business establishment," "origin of income" and "tax liability," that the complex technical problems can be adjusted only through such international treaties, coupled with changes in national tax legislation.

Most American taxpayers are conscious of the blight of double taxation within the nation, but few are perhaps aware of the same blight attaching to international trade. Deperon's presentation is as strong an argument that it should be abolished or at least reduced to within reason in the international field as it is in the domestic field.

The Peace Rumors Are Not All In

REPORTS of German peace overtures are signs the enemy is at last beginning to view the situation as hopeless. Such gestures usually precede surrender by weeks or months if the defeated forces can hold out that long. With great Allied armies moving in from many directions, with cities and the remaining war facilities being blasted relentlessly from the air, Germany is learning at last what total war is like.

The Allied high command repeatedly has stated its position. Nothing short of unconditional surrender will initiate peace negotiations. No Allied capital is interested in proposals which come from an unofficial source. There are accounts to be settled with Nazi war criminals before the conflict can be considered ended.

But the Hitler crowd, if convinced the cause is lost, is apprehensive about what its store for its collective neck. Each day brings the end of Nazism that much nearer. But before the total defeat of Germany there will be many peace rumors.

The Steam-Turbine Locomotive Moves Up

MENTION was made recently of the experiments being conducted by the Pennsylvania railroad engineering experts in the development of the steam-turbine locomotive. It seems now that the Pennsylvania men are going into this in a big and serious way. Announcement has been made that the engineering staff has designed a new type of high-speed coal-burning steam-turbine locomotive, capable of developing 9,000 horse power.

Called the "Triplex," the newest of these new engines is the third on the road's program of improving the design and performance of coal burning steam engines.

In the "Triplex," the usual arrangement of the main sections will be completely changed. At the head will be a large coal compartment, followed immediately by a cab and boiler section, with the cab at the front and the smokestack at the rear. Supporting the whole combination will be a cast-steel frame mounted on two swiveling trucks, one under the coal compartment and the other under the boiler.

Each truck will consist of four pairs of driving wheels and two pairs of guiding wheels. Behind the boiler will be coupled a capacious water tender. A direct-drive steam turbine will be geared to the driving wheels of each of the two swiveling trucks.

Dimensions of the "Triplex," which will be used for both passenger and freight service, approximately the largest ever practically operated on American railroads, the company says. They cover nearly 137 feet of truck from front to rear, with a wheel base of 122 feet. Swiveling trucks, however, will permit operation around any curve that can be negotiated by a passenger coach.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which usually keeps abreast of locomotive development, in some instances having taken a step ahead, hasn't been heard from in this connection, but it is safe to say that its engineering staff is busy with the turbine scheme. Other railroad engineering staffs are also likely busy with it, since the necessity has arisen for meeting the challenge in the pace set by the Diesel engines.

The Forehanded Householder

INDICATIONS from purchases for the armed forces and through trade channels are that the country is going into the season of shortages in many lines of importance in the operation of households.

The people know from their experience of three years that the household equipment industries have been largely diverted to war purposes. Many articles of household equipment and for heating, lighting and sanitary purposes have long been off the market. The war development, even granting the early end of the war in Europe, does not justify, according to manufacturers of these articles, predictions that they will be available in quantity this year.

Warnings issued by the automobile and radio industries apply to practically all household equipment. They know that a vast market awaits the conversion of their industries to peace demands. They are fully prepared to make the most of their opportunity. But even under these favorable conditions, they point out that much time will be necessary to utilize war-born improvements, to get their factories going and to re-establish their sales and distribution organizations.

This seems to be the critical year in the life of household equipment and appliances. There is sure to be some inconvenience and probably some hardship. But the cost in comfort and health can be greatly reduced by making repairs in good time and by good care of parts which are subject to wear.

The forehanded householder will not neglect to make regular inspections of all equipment and to act immediately when his attention is called to faulty operation and signs of trouble due to neglect.

Frequency modulation, we're told, eliminates static from radio. Unfortunately, says the man at the next desk, it is utterly powerless, however, against the singing commercial.

The custom of apologizing to the son of heaven for every reverse has created steady work for Kolso.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN
The Browser herewith acclaim J. D. Ratcliffe's "Yellow Magic" (Random House) the most fascinating mystery-detective story of the current publishing season. And everybody who has a son or a husband or a brother in the war—or who has feared pneumonia, gas gangrene, bacterial myocarditis or any of the other harsh plagues that afflict mankind—should agree with the Browser. . . . Because this book tells the wonderful story of how penicillin was discovered and in an incredibly short time put into production by the big American pharmaceutical houses and sent to our armies and navies.

Although the English scientist Dr. Alexander Fleming first discovered the germ-killing properties of penicillin seventeen years ago, it was not until the Germans were bombing London that men went feverishly to work to use it in saving human lives. In 1928 Dr. Fleming happened to notice that some cultures of staphylococci which he was studying had become contaminated. He was about to throw the ruined culture away when he noticed that for some distance about the mold growth in the little dish—the mold was a greenish-grey color—was a clear zone. WAS DISSOLVING THE MICROBES.

That something was the common mold, penicillium, and Fleming and his associates began to grow penicillium and try the yellow mold on plates of pneumonia microbes and gonococcus and meningococcus. They found that it was a powerful antibacterial substance BUT—it was impossible to produce enough of the material and for that reason everybody forgot about penicillin for ten years.

Then Dr. Howard W. Florey became interested and went to work producing the yellow magic in greater quantities—enough to use on a human being. He learned that it was the greatest forwardstep in medical science in centuries. They discovered that just as it killed staphs and streps in a laboratory, so it would kill them in the human body. It was bland and non-toxic; it was more effective than the sulpha drugs and no microbe was able to build an immunity against it, but again there wasn't enough of it and there would never be enough until it could be produced on massive scale.

The setting of the drama moves to America in war-time, to a government laboratory in Peoria, Illinois. And there the work went on. A new strain more productive of penicillin was found. A new food—corn steep-liquor to which milk sugar had been added—produced an even greater harvest of the precious stuff. New methods of producing penicillin in great tanks were devised. Great American drug concerns first found in June, 1943, and finally seventeen more—were convinced of the need for penicillin, and poured millions of dollars into production and finally, as this book was published, American science and industry was producing a day, to treat 500,000 patients a month.

So we have a drug that is the deadly enemy of pneumonia, meningitis, staph and strep infections, of gonorrhea, syphilis, boils, carbuncles, burn infections, osteomyelitis, bacterial myocarditis, eye and chest-cavity infections, gas gangrene. It cannot effect malaria, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, infantile paralysis, flu or the common cold—but it has opened the door to scientific attack on these enemies of man. The "yellow magic" is a miracle which will save lives by the million and it was placed at the service of man in the very years when the human race seemed to be trying to murder itself.

What detective story you have ever read was as fascinating as this one. And J. D. Ratcliffe has told the story superbly, thinks Marshall Maslin.

Poor Showing of Japs in Philippines Is Seen Due to Change of Invasion Plans

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Resistance to our recent landing on Mindanao has confirmed the suspicion of military men that the major factor contributing to the poor Jap showing in the Philippines was that our campaign just wasn't planned according to Japanese rules. Poorly prepared on Leyte, Mindoro, and Luzon, the Japs had really set themselves up to repel invasion on Mindanao, which they figured would be our first target on the islands.

They were right. But when Adm. Halsey reported to Gen. MacArthur that Leyte appeared to be a soft spot, our plans were changed.

In preparing Mindanao for defense, the Japs called upon a number of "improved" German techniques. Among the most important was their installation of electrically controlled mines — permitting an invader to blow the mines from a distance when our tanks or concentrations of our troops entered the mined areas. This is the first time the Japs have used this technique.

Other practices learned recently from the Nazis include the more efficient setting of booby traps in Manila buildings, and the use of rockets on Luzon and Iwo Jima.

Fortunately for us, the native guerrillas on Mindanao have managed to nullify most of the Jap preparations in the five months since Leyte was invaded.

Can Congressmen Read?

Government agencies have just received an order to cut down the size of type used in official publications, in order to conserve paper. There are two exceptions to the rule. Agencies printing material for school children or illiterate immigrants are permitted to use ordinary typewriter-size type. There is also no limit on the size of type which agencies can use in making reports to Congress.

Pay-off came last week when OPA, perhaps thinking Congressmen can't read as well as school children or illiterate immigrants, sent two thick volumes printed in very large type to each congressman.

A New Jim Farley

Usually a big national election is followed by a lethargic vacuum. Democrats and Republicans both want to forget politics. But this time, leaders of both political parties are already talking about the congressional elections two years hence.

So far as meets the eye, however, Democratic Chairman Bob Hannegan is way out ahead of the Republicans when it comes to translating words into deeds. Hannegan has become just as active as Jim Farley at the peak of his political power, is working at his job eighteen hours a day and is determined that Roosevelt roll up a stronger Democratic majority in the congressional elections two years hence.

Shortly after Roosevelt returned from Yalta, Hannegan called on him, outlined detailed plans for keeping the Democrats in power. Hannegan complained, however, that he wasn't getting much help from some so-called members, pointing out that few cabinet members pitched in to help the party.

The president then suggested that Hannegan call together all the cabinet members except for the secretaries of war and navy, and lay down the law to them. So a few days later, Hannegan threw a small luncheon for the cabinet at which he put his cards on the table. Even the stiff, unbending state department, which tries to walk the political tightrope and has more Republicans than Democrats in its lush jobs, was represented by Assistant Secretary Dean Acheson.

Other cabinet members present were Postmaster General Walker, Secretary of Labor Fanny Perkins, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, Under Secretary of Interior Abe Fortas and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Hannegan Tells 'Em

Hannegan told them that the cabinet was selected by Roosevelt, was supposed to support Roosevelt, and would have to assist in defending Roosevelt politically. Hannegan outlined his program for the '46 elections and requested complete cabinet co-operation.

"There are 500 men in the non-war agencies getting $5,000 a year or more," Hannegan said, waving a little black book in the air, "and with all respect to the Hatch act, we haven't averaged contributions of a dollar apiece from them."

The response was excellent. One cabinet member pointed out that Democrats hadn't had a meeting like this in years. The others pledged all-out co-operation, said they would go down the line.

One significant shift in Democratic plans is that in 1942, Roosevelt did nothing about congressional elections until three weeks before the voting. Finally he summoned House Speaker Rayburn, suggested he see what could be done. Rayburn replied the Democrats didn't have a dollar to help finance congressional campaigns; but he and several others then got busy and

Candor Is Needed About Food Task, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE
WASHINGTON, March 25.—Altruism and generosity will have to be accentuated to the maximum in the next couple years by the American people.

Again—and again in the next twenty-four months or more the United States will have to deprive itself of commodities as well as food products in order to help the peoples of other lands. The job of selling such a program to the American nation will require the utmost in tact and candor. For not only will the United States have to give up some of the luxuries but many of the necessities.

Caution Necessary

It will, therefore, become more than ever desirable for the persons who exercise authority in the name of the United States government to avoid excesses or abuses or mistakes. For however well intentioned officials may be, they do yield to high-pressure pleas or demands from abroad that are not pared to the bone of reality. It would be unfortunate if any economic advantage of unfairness developed in connection with requests for aid from foreign countries; and it will be difficult to detect such attitudes unless the facts are constantly made available.

If the American people, for instance, are to be asked to tighten their belts so that human beings in Europe—whether they be the men, women and children of defeated or Allied or liberated countries—will not starve, it will be essential that the passions of revenge be not permitted to becloud the sense of humanity which must prevail. For in the long run unless stable economic conditions are created in Europe, there will be perennial revolution and warfare and in the end the American people will have to pay a higher cost in armament or in the maintenance of policing armies.

Sniping To Increase

From time to time there has been a good deal of sniping at the humanitarian tradition of the United States as the "sucker's" role. This sort of thing will tend to increase and the only way to reduce such criticism is to be sure that the facts about the "Good Neighbor" policies or our rehabilitation work abroad are at all times open to inspection by the Congress and the press. Too often a fear that criticism might arise causes unnecessary secrecy and in the end brings more criticism than would have been the case had full publicity been given from the outset.

Food and machinery as well as raw materials and money will have to be exported in ever larger quantities after Germany's organized resistance ceases than at present. This is because the entire economic structure of Europe will be in chaos and the accustomed work in the factories and the fields will be seriously interrupted. To rehabilitate Europe will require food for all manner of homeless persons. Indeed, inside Germany will be found millions of nationals from France and other liberated countries who have been enslaved by the Nazis and who will be marooned in Germany when the Nazis are crushed. Such countries as Norway, France, Italy, Holland and Belgium, as well as Poland and the Balkan states, will need reconstruction on a vast scale.

Great Famine Expected

It will be easy enough for selfishness to crop out and for unthinking observers to say that the victors come first or that one nation should be preferred over another. The job is to get enough food for survival into all countries, because already it is being predicted that

Van Sant Pays Tribute to "Good Newspaperman"

Editor The Cumberland News:
My attention has just been called to the fact that Frank Lee Carl died a few days ago. He was always so friendly to me, on the infrequent visits we paid each other in Cumberland and Baltimore, that I thought of him in a very kindly way indeed.

My most recent communication to him was to tell him how much I had enjoyed reading a couple of stories in his column about Tom Fitzgerald and C. W. Galloway, and even now we are planning to run one of them in our magazine. I shall dislike very much having to put in front of his name "the late."

I know how much you must have enjoyed him, not only as an historian of considerable distinction in your local affairs, but as a good newspaperman and a fine gentleman.

Very Sincerely,

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE
Mrs. Roosevelt has received a lot of presents lately—a crown full of jewels, a mink coat, and a harem costume.

About that harem costume, I hope she doesn't wear it the next time Churchill calls—he likes to smoke those cigars, not swallow 'em. It was a gift from the King of Arabia. He was going to send an elephant but then someone told him they stood for over here.

Mrs. Roosevelt has had the gold crown for several years. Every year Morgenthau drops over and chips out a few jewels for his March 15 collection. Some African potentate sent it to her after the president's Casablanca conference.

Eleanor says "the crown is terrific—no body could wear it—it's too heavy." I don't blame her. It would slow her down—she would have to leave three or four countries off her weekly schedule.

Explorers Bow 50-37 in Finals; Shaffer Again Named Outstanding Player at Newport

The LaSalle High Explorers, although they came off second best in the eighth annual Eastern States Catholic Invitation basketball tournament at Newport, R. I., carried away more than their share of awards.

Defeated 50-37 by the rangy LaSalle academy quint of New York, after reaching the finals, the Explorers might have retained the championship had they been as sharp in their shooting as they were in the semi-finals when they made thirty per cent of their shots.

The locals got the shots again in the finals, being credited with sixty-one attempts, but they found the hoops only seventeen times while the New Yorkers polled the astonishing score of twenty out of forty-eight.

Ray Shaffer, LaSalle guard, was unquestionably the hero of the game with eight fielders and two foul shots, and when he was named the outstanding player of the tournament for the second straight year, his selection caused little surprise.

It was the first time in the history of the Newport event that a player won the distinction twice.

Carl Muller and Jack Steiner were also close to top form but Tommy "Bones" Geatz and Ed "Bunny" Tunning just couldn't get going in the shooting department.

Geatz made only one of twenty shots while Tunning failed to connect on any of eight tosses.

For LaSalle academy, Henry Harvey was the No. 1 performer with twenty-three points but it was a fast, five-man ball club that won a well-deserved victory.

The New Yorkers took a 11-5 lead in the opening quarter and were in front 28-17 at the half and 36-25 at the close of the third period.

LaSalle led only twice—4-2 and 5-4 early in the tussle.

Although they failed to bring home the bacon, the Explorers have a right to be proud of themselves and their school's great record in Newport tournament history.

LaSalle finished first, second and third in the three years they appeared in the tourney.

Shaffer, in addition to being named the best player, was placed in the all-tournament team along with Geatz. Other members of the mythical quint are Phil Kenney, LaSalle Military academy; Jake Bornheimer, LaSalle Military academy; and Mike Wiak, LaSalle academy.

The eight members of the championship LaSalle academy were presented miniature gold basketballs, while the Explorers received silver basketballs for runnerup honors.

The placing of two Explorers on the first all-tourney team and the naming of a LaSalle tosser as outstanding player marked the third time these honors went to Cumberlanders. In 1943, when LaSalle finished third, George Geatz was voted the outstanding player and along with Bobby Stakem snared places on the all-tourney team. Last year, Jim Fahey was named to the all-tourney five in addition to Shaffer.

The LaSalle squad is due to arrive back in Cumberland tomorrow night around 9 o'clock and a large turnout is expected to welcome the Explorers when they pull into the Queen City station.

Massive Attack

miles to get set for today's push.

These combat groups moving forward now are mobile, and prepared to move swiftly.

Strike First Blows
"We are ready to move fast if this thing breaks," said Maj. Marshall Garth of Alexandria, Va.

Armored columns began moving up at 4 a. m., and at 6 a. m. passed through infantry lines to strike the first blows.

Armored elements drove through the flaming village of Asbach, an important road hub, and seized Kircheln thirteen miles from the Rhine on the Hennen-Altenkirchen highway.

Endless columns moved up along dusty roads on this warm spring day through the hills in which began the legend of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

German engineers blew every bridge, chopped down trees, and planted mines as thick as birdseed along every road, slowing the pace of the drive.

Long Column Advances
A long column swung through Asbach, with disciplined power in its line of light and medium tanks, tank destroyers, half-tracks, gas trucks, and jeeps winding in and out like fox terriers trotting around a column of perchon horses.

A dozen fires burned in Asbach, caught for one epic moment in the flaming vortex of battle.

A number of its ancient plaster and timbered homes, set afire by shells blazed hotly. Debris littered the streets—as in the streets of dozens of Allied cities taken by the Germans in their day of power.

Householders hid meekly in their cellars, or pulled treasured belongings from burning homes.

A house near the center of town has burned almost to street level, but a man kept running frantically a block and a half to fill two pails with water. Then he hurried back with the water slopping against his trousers, and hurled it into the fire.

Sewell To Shoot At Third Straight 20-Game Season

Pirate Hurler Says He Has "Blooper Pitch" Primed for Action

By JERRY LISK

MUNCIE, Ind., March 25 (AP)—Truett Banks Sewell, who is crowding "37," reports his legs, wind and tantalizing "blooper pitch" all are primed for his third straight twenty-game season.

If the Pittsburgh Pirates, virtually intact from last season's second place finish, catch the springtime enthusiasm of the "Rip," the champion St. Louis Cardinals are a collection of dead birds.

In his first workout last week, Sewell tolled three innings with the jubilation of a rookie. He threw his slow-motion dive bomb pitch, was swinging at the plate like Joe DiMaggio and running the bases with Cobb-like fervor.

"I could have gone nine innings," he said. "I'm in great shape—weight 185, the same as when I quit last season. I'd be ready to get right in there if the season opened tomorrow."

20-Game Winner Needs "Breaks"
Sewell isn't too cheery, though. "A pitcher has to get all the breaks all the way to win twenty games," he said.

The Cardinals, who finished far ahead of the runnerup Pirates last season, better hope Sewell doesn't get "all the breaks" this summer.

The ace right-hander finished with a 21-12 record last season despite a tough of pleurisy that had him in the ropes for almost a month.

In 1943, Sewell won twenty-one and lost nine and probably would have topped Mort Cooper, of the Cards (21-8), if he hadn't damaged his elbow trying to slide and sat out the final two weeks of the season.

Sewell, who is 4-F because of hunting accident which occurred Dec. 7, 1941, the day of the Pearl Harbor attack, said he crowded as much hunting, golf and hiking as he could into his winter stay at plant City, Fla.

Changed Pitching Style
"A baseball player, no matter what position he plays, is only as good as his legs," he emphasized. "His leg eye or his arm will develop automatically, if he can travel at top speed."

Sewell still carries three of the fifteen shotgun pellets that sprayed his right leg when a hunter mistook him for fair game at thirty feet. The accident made him change his pitching style, much to the regret of National League hitters.

"I have to work straight backward and forward on my pivot leg," he explained, "and as a result my body screens my pitches until they almost reach the batter."

Jim Hines Has 285
Back of the leaders came Jimmy Hines, of Chicago, at 285, on a morning round of 66 which was low for the tournament until Nelson's stretch drive.

Craig Wood, the duration National open champion from Mamaronck, N. Y., dropped back with a pair of 73s for a total of 286.

Snead had 287, finishing with a 70, his first sub-par round after taking a 74 in the morning when he knocked in an eagle three on the eighteenth hole after having five over par through seventeen holes.

First place was worth $1,333 in war bonds to Nelson, already the leading money winner of the year. The present record of six victories in one winter tour was set by Jimmy Demaret in 1940 and equaled by Snead this season.

26 of 28 Players At A's Camp 4-F

FREDERICK, Md., March 25 (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics counted up today almost a complete team of 4-Fs, with all but two of the twenty-eight players on hand in that draft category.

The arrival yesterday of Dick Siebert, veteran first baseman and the A's leading hitter last year, completed the 4-F infield.

The 185-pound Siebert, who is 31 and the father of three children, said his St. Paul, Minn., draft board reclassified him 4-F because of "Bilateral instability of the left knee."

No matter what, it was good news to Connie Mack. The 82-year-old president and manager of the American League permanent contenders beamed when he greeted his hard-hitting first sacker, who has played more than 100 games during each of the last six seasons.

"It doesn't matter how you came, as long as you got here," said Connie, after Siebert told of traveling to Frederick by plane and bus. "Now, if we only had one or two more power hitters, we'd be right up there. But where are we going to get them?"

"We lost a lot of close games last season. This year we will win a lot of them, and I feel certain we'll finish in the first division."

3 Firemen Celebrate Birthdays Today

Three members of Central Fire Company No. 1 will celebrate their birthdays today on the thirty-ninth anniversary of Cumberland Fire Department.

The firemen are Capt. William L. Lindner, 516 Columbia avenue; Francis J. Wallace, 43 New Hampshire avenue; and Victor G. Long, 612 Columbia avenue.

Central and South End companies were established March 26, 1906; West Side a year later, and East Side company in 1942.

Military men say that the Nazi elite troops, heart of the party's power, can be counted on to fight until they fall.

These are the men the Nazi party hopes (a fading hope) to take into the fastness of Bavaria and Austria. It is true that at the southern end of the front the prospects are better, even good. But they are only a part, presumably a small part, of the total elite troop strength.

Nelson Captures Greensboro Open With 271 Total

Lord Byron Beats Out Byrd, Defending Champ, by Eight Strokes

By FRITZ LITTLEJOHN

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 25 (AP)—Continuing the torrid pace he has been setting in recent weeks, Byron Nelson, the Toledo, Ohio, sharpshooter, won the $7,500 Greensboro open golf tournament today with a seventy-two-hole total of 271.

It was Lord Byron's second title in five days and his sixth victory this winter.

He defeated Sammy Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., Wednesday in a playoff to win top money in the Charlotte open. Nelson fashioned two great rounds of 68 and 66 today as the winter circuit's largest throng milled about the par 71 Starmount country club course, to beat out Sam Byrd, of Detroit, the defending champion, by eight strokes and Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., the early leader, who was nine strokes off the pace.

Nelson, Snead Now Even
His win today enabled Nelson to pull even with Snead in victories, each having six, with two tournaments yet to go. Snead faltered today and was far down the list with a total of 287.

Nelson who is not a spectacular putter as a rule, put on one of his greatest exhibitions on the carpets today, to clip eight strokes from par. In the last twenty-seven holes of the great runnerup dropped points of fifteen, twenty, twelve, sixteen, twenty-two and eleven feet, five of them for birdies, and two for eagles to streak away from the field.

Byrd, making a strong bid with closing rounds of 68 and 69 to keep the title he won in 1942, the last time the tournament was played, came up with 279, which was a duplicate of his card when he won the title in 1942.

Revolta, the first-round leader, closed with 71s, still chipping close to the pin and using a minimum of putts, but he could not keep the pace set by the deadly accurate Nelson with whom he was playing.

Jimmy Hines Has 285
Back of the leaders came Jimmy Hines, of Chicago, at 285, on a morning round of 66 which was low for the tournament until Nelson's stretch drive.

Craig Wood, the duration National open champion from Mamaronck, N. Y., dropped back with a pair of 73s for a total of 286.

Memorial

In loving memory of our beloved son and brother, Cecil Guy Friend, whom God called home two years ago today, March

None is the face we loved so dear,
None is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thoughts to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was

And who, though absent, is just as dear.
Our dear one has passed away,
Passed from earth and earthly darkness

But we must all cease to languish,
Ore the grave of him we love,
Strive to be prepared to meet him
in the better world above.

Governor Offers To Hold Hearing On City Bills

Mayor and Council Are Invited to Annapolis Tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Governor Herbert R. O'Connor yesterday invited the mayor and council to come to Annapolis tomorrow at 2 p. m., at which time a hearing will be held in the state house in connection with legislative bills affecting Cumberland.

The invitation from the governor was received yesterday by Mayor Thomas S. Post and will be submitted to members of the council today for their approval of rejection.

Veto Asked on Bills

Mayor Post said the governor recently was asked to veto certain bills pertaining to Cumberland after they were approved by the Senate and House of Delegates. At that time, the state's chief executive was advised that the city would be represented at Annapolis if the governor desired to conduct a hearing on the bills.

Eight legislative bills pertaining to Cumberland have been introduced in the state legislature since the opening of the 1945 session in January. Only one, however, has been given approval by the mayor and council and that was the $150,000 bond issue for Memorial Hospital Nurses' Home.

A house bill providing that the city publish a complete financial statement in a newspaper at the close of the fiscal year was killed in the Senate but there are hopes other city bills at Annapolis and the council would like to have the governor kill certain measures with his veto power.

Five Sent to Governor

Five of the seven bills have been approved by both houses and are now in the governor's hands. They are:

HB 336—Relating to experience required to take tests for chief, assistant chief and lieutenant of police department and chief and assistant chief of fire department.

HB 617—Memorial Hospital Nurses' Home $150,000 bond issue.

SB 272—City bonus bill which gives employees of city ten per cent increase in wages and imposes special tax of five cents on each $100 assessable property. Based on wages received prior to April 1, 1943, employees receive 20 per cent increase and property owners pay fifteen cents special tax on each $100 worth of assessable property.

SB 313—Increases number of days off monthly for members of police department from two to four.

SB 314—Increases number of days off monthly for members of fire department from two to four.

The latest bills to be introduced are HB 389, repealing a section of the law which prohibits pensioned members of the fire department from running for elective offices and SB 618, which provides for a revision of the city charter.

Lt. Col. John Golden Will Drill CAP Cadets

Lt. Col. John Golden will drill the CAP cadets tonight at the armory, according to Maj. Arthur Lyem, head of the local army. Lt. Col. Golden is well acquainted with this role, as he was in charge of the drilling at the armory prior to his induction into armed service.

The lieutenant colonel will also give a talk to the cadets concerning his experiences in the European theater of war, and will present an interesting display of trophies he accumulated in the line of duty.

Maj. Lyem announced last night that local Squadron No. 331, will receive two pieces of expensive equipment this week from the army air force. This equipment is for the use of the cadets and will be on display at Fort Hill high school upon its arrival. The equipment includes a reflector trainer, used for aircraft identification and range-finder, and a basic turret trainer. The latter is approximately the same as the turret used on the army medium and heavy bombers. It is electrically operated and includes a projector which flashes the aircraft on a screen. The operator can adjust it from side to side with his feet, and up and down with his wrist, until the aircraft is sighted correctly for firing aim.

Sends Medal Home

The Purple Heart medal awarded to Staff Sgt. Melvin Arrington, who was wounded in Germany, March 1, has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Arrington, 186 Main street, Ridgeley. Sgt. Arrington has been in the army for twenty-eight months, and served with the Tenth armored division.

State OPA Plans For Distribution Of Canning Sugar

War price and rationing boards in Maryland will begin issuing sugar for canning fruits and making jellies on May 1, J. William Eggleston, state rationing executive, announced yesterday.

This year housewives will get all of their canning sugar by ration stamps to their local boards. No ration stamps will be good for canning sugar. Boards will determine the amount of sugar needed, based on information furnished by the housewife.

The total amount of canning sugar allowed for each person will not be more than twenty pounds this year. No more than 160 pounds a family can be allowed even if there are more than eight persons in it.

For canning fruits or fruit jellies, the allowances will be on the basis of one pound of sugar for each quart to be canned. With the twenty pound maximum allowance, five pounds of sugar for each person will be allowed for canning vegetables and for making jams, jellies, relishes, catsup and the curing of meats.

The local boards will provide a form for each applicant to fill out. A family may apply only twice for canning sugar this year. Applications must be made before October 31. No applications will be accepted by boards prior to May 1, 1945.

OPA also announced yesterday that shoe ration boards issued to discharged servicemen hereafter will contain two valid shoe stamps instead of a single stamp ordinarily allowed. Granting discharged servicemen the use of two regular shoe ration stamps is part of the program, OPA officials said, to adjust OPA regulations to assist veterans in their return to civilian life.

Boards have been advised that the new ruling applies to all books issued to veterans after March 28, 1945.

Sugar stamp No. 35 is the only one that is good now. It may be used through June 2. Another sugar stamp will become valid on May 1, providing an overlap of one month.

DISCHARGED WACS ARE ENTITLED TO THEIR OLD JOBS

All women who left civilian jobs and enlisted directly in the WAC are entitled to reinstatement in their old jobs or assistance in securing a new position after their honorable discharge from the service, Sgt. Ruth Baker, local WAC recruiter, said yesterday.

Such women must have been employed on a permanent basis by the federal government or a private employer, and must have left the position after May 1, 1940, and directly entered the armed forces, the recruiter said.

Application for re-employment must be made within ninety days after receiving an honorable discharge from the WAC, and the applicant must be capable of performing the duties of her former position. Employers will not be required to reinstate such women if the former circumstances have changed so as to make re-employment impossible or unreasonable in the same or equivalent position, Sgt. Baker said.

After their reinstatement, returned WACS will have the right to participate in all insurance and other benefits of the employer, effective when they entered the service. Unless there is cause for doing so, their employers may not discharge them for one year after such reinstatement.

Local selective service boards, the United States Employment Service, and veteran counselors will aid honorably discharged WACS in obtaining reinstatement or new positions, Sgt. Baker added.

Col. Henderson Commends ASTRP Tests for Youths

285 Now in Training at VPI; Exams Scheduled Here on April 12

Col. George Henderson, veteran of the First World War, former mayor of Cumberland and present commandant at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va., recommends the Army Specialized Training Reserve Program as "excellent training for high school youths."

During his recent visit here Col. Henderson commended the program which in conjunction with Ralph R. Webster, principal of Allegheny high school, and the recommendation is timely because of the fact that another group of young men from Allegheny high school will be given the opportunity of qualifying for ASTRP in the county high schools Thursday, April 12.

Discussing the program, Col. Henderson stated that at the present time 285 youths of preindustrial age are receiving free college instruction at VPI, and he expects enrollment at the Virginia school to increase to 500 with the 1945 allotment from the various high schools.

Col. Henderson stated that the high schools are now under way and arrangements for the tests are in charge of the principals.

307 Have Taken Exams
This is the third successive year the tests are to be conducted in Allegheny county. Ninety-two took the examinations on March 15, 1944. Proctor Teachers college leading with 35 registrants followed in order by LaSalle 17, Allegheny and Fort Hill 12 each; Bruce, 6, and Central and St. Paul 5 each.

Tests were inaugurated in the county April 2, 1943, when a total of 215 took the examinations at seven schools, namely: Allegheny 70, Proctor Teachers 38, Fort Hill 35, Bruce 30, LaSalle 17, Central 14 and Barton 11.

A large percentage of the 307 youths have or are now receiving pre-induction instruction at the nation's leading colleges and universities.

Those eligible for this program are youths who have applied or who appear at the designated schools or colleges before 9 a. m. on examination day, students who will be less than 17 years and nine months old next July 1 and those who will be high school graduates on that date.

The tests are being conducted to ascertain who are best fitted for the army's specialized training reserve program and the navy's college program. Examinations are designed to sample the attitude and general knowledge of the nation's pre-induction age youths.

Tests Last Two Hours
The two-hour examinations are divided into three parts, namely:

1. Testing the knowledge of the meaning and use of words.
2. Questions about scientific matters which are of general knowledge.
3. Problems in arithmetic.

Successful completion of the test is tantamount to enlistment in the armed forces and a student would not have to enter the army or navy reserve program if offered a scholarship.

Continuance of the ASTRP is definite proof that the program has paid rich dividends. Not only has it been a great benefit to the army as a whole, but it also has rewarded the individual participant far beyond what ordinarily would be expected.

Between now and April 12 the story of the ASTRP should reach every young man who is eligible to take part in the program. None should be allowed to miss this opportunity for greater service to his country.

Trained Soldiers Needed
Each day on the far-flung battlefronts of the world it becomes more and more apparent that the trained soldier is the man who can most efficiently carry on the war to a successful conclusion. The young men who have completed their ASTRP training are helping write the blazing pages of American history that will mark every victory of the American forces.

The program continues its policy of placing emphasis on classroom and supervised study. The time spent on military and physical training is sufficient to enable the young men to fully develop and co-ordinate their bodies.
